
Today's Music

Welcome back to our guest musician, Hannah Waterstone!

Prelude: Gymnopedie #1 Eric Satie (1866-1925)

Satie demonstrated many traits of Asperger's Syndrome, and his creative life was used to study a possible link between creativity and psychopathy. One trait was food obsession which limited his diet to a few unusual items such as shredded bones, sausage in camphor, fat of dead animals, cotton salad, moldy fruit, and a few other more typical foods.

Prelude: Lean on Me #1021
Words & music by Bill Withers

Musical Meditation: Way Over Yonder

Offertory: Dream Gaze #2

Recessional: The Wild Horseman
Robert Schumann

Robert Schumann suffered lifelong mental illness, possibly bipolar disorder. Schumann even selected names for his two contrasting selves: Florestan was an impetuous character from Beethoven's opera "Fidelio" and emotional Eusebius was named after a 3rd century pope. As Clara Schumann was a stabilizing influence in his life, he named his balanced self "Raro" by combining the names Clara and Robert.

Sunday Sermons

3/31, TODAY, 11:00AM – "On Dorothea Dix"

Sally Borden, Guest Speaker

Dorothea Dix, a strong Unitarian woman, survived a traumatic childhood and suffered mental illness herself. But out of this trauma, she managed to get state governments in every state in the U. S. during the mid-1800's to open at least one mental hospital to provide treatment, relieve suffering, and stop the jailing of the mentally ill. Have we now gone backward?

4/7 11:00AM – "Getting to Ye$"

Dan Secrest, Guest Speaker

We will kick off our annual pledge campaign with a rousing discussion of where we stand as a church, and how we can progress together.
